Tinley Park Makes Good Record In Health Survey

It is considered by the various departments of Health, advisable to make a check-up of the general health conditions of at least one town in each Nurse's district, once a year and this year Tinley Park was selected in district 3 for the survey.

There was 156 home calls made in 97 families the required information was secured, in 59 homes the nurse did not gain admittance, either because the family was absent of the housewife could not speak English, or in a few cases, the family "did not wish to be interviewed on the question of health."

The 97 families interviewed consisted of 102 men, 115 women and 105 children. Of these children, 41 were of pre-school age and therefore eligible to attend the Welfare Conference held in Midlothian the first Tuesday of each month from 1 to 4 P.M., for all the children in Bremen township who are of pre-school age. I find there is a train leaves Tinley Park at 2:23 P. M. that will bring the mothers and babies to the Health Station, and a train leaving Midlothian at 4:13 which will take them back home in good time for their evening meal.

The Ladies of the Welfare Committee will meet the 2:23 train from Tinley Park the first Tuesday of each month and bring the mothers and babies to the Conference and return them to the R. R. Station in time for their homeward train. So we hope to see some of our Tinley babies at our next Conference September 7th.

The Health Survey showed a marked decrease in contagion in Tinley Park during the past year and with a few exceptions the towns were found in a very sanitary condition.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The United States Senate has passed a bill placing a penalty on persons shooting and trapping pigeons and other in common.

A married man and several people in the vicinity of Mokena who have lots of fancy pigeons and racing homers, it is best to be careful of the birds shot and trapped.

Persons caught with pigeons of this nature belonging to other people will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, by clubs to which they belong.

Oak Lawn Starts Drive for $15,000 Com. Club House

A drive is being made by the heads of the Oak Lawn Community Club for a new clubhouse they expect to put under construction very soon. The building is figured at a cost of approximately $15,000 having private club rooms, lockers, check rooms, kitchen, dining room, and a large dance floor with a big stage at one end and dressing rooms on either side. Another big boost for the community.

Bungalow Sold For $9,000

Mrs. A. Higgins, 9108 Massasoit Ave., Oak Lawn has sold her new bungalow to E. J. Kraus for the sum of $9,000. Mrs. Higgins and family will move to Chicago in the near future.

Sag Picnic Aug. 15

An event of special interest to Catholics is the annual Sag Picnic to be held on the grounds of the St. James church at Sag Bridge, Illinois, Sunday Aug. 15th. The picnic was to have been held last Sunday but the weather man being out of sorts the rain spoiled the day. Father Peter Gergathy announces that there will be one fine time for all. There will be games, races, dancing, fine music and many fine amusements. Come to the Sag!

Palos Park News

Miss Winifred Jones, the pretty auburn haired young pianist, who has frequently played for us in Palos Park and who has been giving music lessons to a number of our Palos Park children for several years, is very seriously ill in a hospital in Chicago. Miss Jones has been an unusually talented and ambitious girl, carrying on her High school and Normal school work, and at the same time studying music. Her many friends wish her a speedy recovery.

The policy of the Village of Palos Park, has always been one of consideration for the motorist, few arrests having been made. Now that 117th street is open to Blue Island, however, the speeding of the motorists down the main street of the village, 123rd, is becoming a real menace to the safety of everyone. Many motorists seem to be ignorant of the fact that they are passing through a village, so it looks as though the officials will be forced to be less lenient in the future.

An accident occurred on 123rd, the other evening, when two cars from opposite directions reached the top of the hill at the old Sharpshooter's park at the same time, both of the cars being driven in the middle of the road. As they struck, one car was knocked into the ditch on one side of the road and the other car thrown into the ditch on the other. Miraculously no one of the occupants was seriously hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hunter (Blenda Thorsell) were mixed up in an automobile accident the other day. A car from the opposite direction tried to pass the car in front of it and in passing smashed into Mr. Hunter's Stutz. The Hunters were not injured. The Stutz is so heavy that at the impact it was stopped dead still, but the other car careened into the ditch. All of the occupants were cut by glass, and one girl is still in the hospital.

Last Saturday Mr. McCaskey drove over to the Ski Jump to look for niggerheads to be used in their new work. He took with him "Licker" their thoroughbred Toy Boston Bulldog. Licker jumped out of the car when Mr. McCaskey stopped, and when leaving he forgot all about the dog. As soon as he noticed her absence he hurried right back to the spot where he had stopped, but could find no trace of her. The serious part of the situation is that Licker has four young puppies at home who are starving to death. Any information concerning the lost mother of the puppies will be greatly appreciated by the McCaskeys whose phone number is Palos Park 69M1.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Quin entertained relatives from Milwaukee last Sunday.

While making the westward trip to California, Mrs. Olivia B. Strohman sprained her ankle, tearing the ligaments badly. She and Judith continued their trip despite the ankle, but it of course prevented their doing many things which they had previously planned to do. Mrs. Strohman and Judith are both back home in Palos now, but the ankle is still badly swollen and Mrs. Strohman can get around only with the aid of a cane.

The Palos Polo Club has recently held a special meeting to consider the eligibility of Mr. Thomas Quin for membership, as he had requested that he be made a member of the Club. Mr. Edward Hyink, one of the pillars of the organization objected to the acceptance of Mr. Quin because of his excessive weight. He was therefore blackballed. It is sometimes necessary for the feelings of an individual to be sacrificed for the good of a team and we feel sure that Mr. Quin will feel consoled, when he sees the Palos Polo Team galloping its way to victory, and bringing glory and fame to his beloved Palos.

Misses Ruth and Harriet Pashley are crowding into their western trip many interesting experiences. Recently they climbed Mount Ranier. They found it a rather chilly trip, using eight blankets for covering one night, and still remaining cold.

Mass meeting of citizens at his home last Saturday night to protest against the Mokena paving project, but this was an error as Mr. Geuther did not call such a meeting and knew nothing about it.

Siamese Twins

Coming to Joliet

The radiant optimism, the contentment and the good cheer which have been the keynote of Daisy and Violet Hilton's struggle to overcome the strange handicap Nature placed upon them in inseparably linking their bodies together, brings to mind the old Mississippi River poker axiom—in effect, that good poker isn't in getting good hands, but in playing poor hands well.

The talent and skill, the grace and the charm with which they present their artistic little vaudeville offering, is evidence that the Hilton girls, "San Antonio's Siamese Twins", have played their hand well,—and have made the most out of what might have been a poor hand. Daisy and Violet Hilton are the only twins alive who were born joined together.

Although born joined together, they enjoy the ease and freedom of movement common to other normal and wholesome young girls of seventeen. In addition to the theatrical talents which have made them one of vaudeville's greatest sensation, they swim and box, play tennis and golf, dance and in every other way get the maximum enjoyment out of life.

With the Trade Twins, these girls present an unusual, a varied and wholly entertaining act. They are to appear at the Joliet Rialto theatre, the "Wonder Theatre" of the state, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 12, 13 and 14. Their act is in addition to other stage specialties.

The Rialto is a $2,000,000 de luxe theatre, and one of the architectural achievements of the middle west.

Mrs. Albert Hodell of Mokena, Dies

Mrs. Elizabeth Hodell, aged 62 years, died at her home in Mokena Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, following a siege of illness suffering from cancer of the stomach. She has been in poor health for over a year and a half and the last two months was confined to her bed off and on.

Mrs. Hodell was a loving mother and kind friend and will be greatly missed.

Elizabeth Hodell nee Lorenz, was born in Germany June 18, 1864 and came to America with her parents when 14 years old. They settled in the vicinity of Mokena and resided here ever since. The deceased located in Mokena 23 years ago.

On April 20, 1910 she was united in marriage with Albert Hodell who passed away four years ago.

The deceased is survived by one son John, two daughters Mrs. Mary Hartwig of Chicago Heights and Mrs. Minnie Martin of Mokena, 2 grandchildren, 5 brothers, George Lorenz of Tinley Park, William of Mokena, Ernest of Steger, Henry of Spencer and Herman of Joliet, 2 sisters, Mrs. Emma Penrose and Mrs. Carrie Werner of Joliet.

Funeral services were held from the late home Friday morning at 9 o'clock to St. Mary's Catholic church. Burial in St. John cemetery Mokena.

To Hold Bazar

Preparations are under way for a Grand Bazaar for the benefit of St. Michael's church, Orland to be held October 6th and 9th. Among the many interesting features may be mentioned a Ford Coupe will be given away at the close of the bazaar and the dinners, the first of which will be prepared and served by the men of the parish and the other by the women. The committee in charge will welcome donations from the members and friends of St. Michael's parish.

A Communication

Editor News-Bulletin:

I would like to say a few words thru the columns of your paper concerning the street paving idea which is being proposed by Mokena village board. It seems to me and so very many others, as a most unreasonable thing and should be defeated.

It would appear that the handful who are boosting for the paving of Mokena streets, are chiefly doing so for their own interests and not for the interests of the people who own property.

Some unthinking boosters for this measure have said that persons who could not afford to pay for the proposed paving have no business to own property and should get out of town. Now that is a silly remark to make and only stirs up strife and enmity in the village. It would be considered an awful thing for that remark to be made about them by those opposing this measure who have as much right to their ideas on the matter as those in favor of it.

It might be true that our town has not progressed much lately, but progress is too dear when it is accomplished through what appears like an autocratic spirit on the part of the village board. Why have they not done something ere this? True progress must come from the bottom up but this seems in one way starting at the top and then there will surely come a great fall.

The Local Board of Improvements were to have met Wednesday night but owing to a Masonic picnic that day to which a number of the board members wanted to attend, the meeting was postponed.

Hardly anyone in Mokena is not in favor of the village advancing. The property owners are in favor of having the streets Macadamized. There can be free State Stone secured and the only cost would be for the freight and the labor of hauling and spreading. By doing this the side and connecting streets can be placed in good shape and as traffic is not heavy on these streets they would last for a long time. An expensive concrete paving program is out of the question at this time.

The big trouble with our village dads, is that they do not take the citizens in their confidence but plan things unbeknown to any but a favored few and then spring the plans on the citizens. Our village dads are often times assuming an autocratic attitude and apparently forget they do not own the village but are merely the servants of the people.

What is needed far more than paved streets, is the extension of the water mains to all parts of the village for fire protection and also for revenue. At present there are 80 water users whereas if the water mains were extended as many if not more water users could be added to the village water department patrons which would mean a nice additional income each year.

It is time the citizens are waking up to the state of affairs existing in our village and elect a new board next spring that will do things in a business like way and not like a crowd of school boys.

India to Christianize West Says Pastor

Rev. Stover who spent 15 years in India, gave a very profound address at the Mokena M. E. church Sunday evening on "India and the way the East is viewing the West." To the Eastern mind it is hard to conceive of a God that can be asked to give victory to every warring nation. During the world war, priests and preachers in pulpits of America, France, Germany, England, Russia and many other countries all prayed to the same God asking Him to give the victory to their armies. To the Oriental mind it is impossible to see how God could do such a thing.

The Orientals believe in Jesus Christ but not in Christianity because it is over run with creeds and dogmas and is anything but what Christ taught in many cases.

Rev. Stover said that our Christian belief came from the East, that the West has Westernized it and then sent it back to the East and that the time is coming when the East will be sending missionaries to the West to bring them the true Christian faith.

80 PER CENT OF MOKENA PROPERTY OWNERS ARE OPPOSED TO PAVING

Over 80 per cent of the property owners in the Village of Mokena have signified their opposition to the proposed concrete street paving plan of the local board of improvements by signing petitions to this body setting forth their opposition to any asphalt or concrete paving which the board may suggest.

The chief reason why the property owners are opposed to the proposed paving is that it will create a hardship to many of the property holders to meet the special assessments, interest on same and a high village tax on top of it all.

The books of the Village Treasurer show that the village of Mokena is over $7,500 in debt and instead of getting out of debt, the village dads are getting in deeper each year. Last fall the village council levied more village tax than they could collect on the assessed property valuation of the village with the result that they were $800 short and had to borrow $1,000 cash to keep the village government running.

The cost of keeping up the front street is also a heavy one. To top the climax, the village water tank sprung a leak and it cost the village board $280 to get it repaired and since then the tower has sprung another leak. It is understood that a new bowl seems to be the only remedy and this will cost $2400. This is a necessity and will have to be done sooner or later. This, with the present indebtedness would mean that the tax payers of the village would have $10,000 of debts on their hands and if a special assessment and the interest on this, is added on top of the other debts, it will be a heavy burden and owners will not be able to meet such unreasonable taxation. A number of people are buying their homes on the installment plan and are paying off monthly and they could not keep up payments with heavy taxes and assessments and would naturally have to give up their homes and lose whatever they had paid in. This would be a detriment to the progress of the village.

A number of property owners own lots that are bounded by streets on three sides which would mean an exceptionally heavy assessment which in one or two instances would cost more than the property is worth.

The property owners of Mokena are in favor of public improvements but in a reasonable way.

There is no factory or other industry here which would give employment so that most of the people have to work in Blue Island or Chicago. There is nothing here that would bring up the prices of property and simply constructing

White Store Buys Part of Stock of Balchowsky Store

The White Store of Joliet, known all over Will County as one of the most enterprising mercantile establishments in that city, has purchased the dry goods, rubber goods and household furnishings of B. Balchowsky & Sons of Frankfort. The stock will be removed to Joliet the forepart of next week and placed on sale at the White Store.

The Balchowsky store is one of the oldest business places in Eastern Will County, being established by B. Balchowsky in 1877. Mr. Balchowsky located in the present building in 1880. As the years went on Mr. Balchowsky found trade continually increasing and soon built up a flourishing business. When his sons grew up, they took over the management of the store with the father and continued so for many years.

For half a century this store has been one of the big institutions of Frankfort and eastern Will County. A very large stock was carried so that the store was in fact a veritable department store.

The motto of the firm was "Good Goods Always", to which they lived rigidly up to.

Some years ago the store was greatly enlarged to take care of the constantly expanding business.

U. S. To Investigate Distillery Sale

The still raided three times on the Waldvogel farm east of Frankfort has engaged the attention of the Government and assistant U. S. District Attorney D. C. Hutchinson of Chicago has asked Sheriff John Walker of Will County to produce records regarding sale of distillery apparatus which was to have been junked but which was not removed from the still and which was put back into use by the moonshiners as proved in the third raid by U. S. Agents, a week ago. Sheriff Walker says he had nothing to do with the raid nor the sale of the distillery apparatus which was sold for $400. He says State's Attorney Rehn conducted the raid and held the sale. Much interest is being aroused in the government's investigation.

concrete paving will not boom the town but on the contrary have a tendency to keep outside buyers of property away, as they would not care to be paying off a mortgage against their property for the next ten years.

"A MAN-DEVIL"

Synopsis.—Part wolf, part dog—when two months old Baree has his first meeting with an enemy, Papayuchisew (young owl). Fighting hard, the young-onset is suddenly plunged into a swollen creek. Badly buffeted, and half drowned, Baree is finally flung on the bank, but the water has destroyed his sense of direction and he is lost, lonely and hungry. For many days his life is one of fear and distress. He meets various creatures of the wild and goes through a thunderstorm. He is learning more and more. He strays into the trapping grounds of Pierrot and Nepeese. Nepeese wounds Baree with a rifle, but he escapes. Baree discovers and learns nature's secrets rapidly. Nepeese is determined to catch Baree and tame him and tries again. Baree is strongly drawn to the girl, but still fears man. Baree makes friends with the beaver.

It may be that Umisk saw him. It may be that very soon the story of his adventure was known by all the inhabitants of Beaver Town. For when Baree came upon Umisk eating his supper of alder bark that evening, Umisk stood his ground to the last inch, and for the first time they smelled noses. At least Baree sniffed audibly, and plucky little Umisk sat like a rolled-up sphinx. That was the final cementing of their friendship—on Baree's part. He capered about extravagantly for a few moments, telling Umisk how much he liked him, and that they'd be great chums. Umisk didn't talk. He didn't make a move until he resumed his supper. But he was a companionable looking little fellow, for all that, and Baree was happier than he had been since the day he left the old windfall.

That friendship, even though it outwardly appeared to be quite one-sided, was decidedly fortunate for Umisk. When Baree was at the pond, he always kept as near to Umisk as possible, when he could find him. One day he was lying in a patch of grass, half asleep, while Umisk busied himself in a clump of alder-shoots a few yards away. It was the warning crack of a beaver tail that fully roused Baree; and then another and another, like pistol-shots. He jumped up. Everywhere beavers were scurrying for the pond.

Just then Umisk came out of the alders and hurried as fast as his short, fat legs would carry him toward the water. He had almost reached the mud when a lightning flash of red passed before Baree's eyes in the afternoon sun, and in another instant Napakaseew—the he-fox—had fastened his sharp fangs in Umisk's throat. Baree heard his little friend's agonized cry; he heard the frenzied flap-flap of many tails—and his blood pounded suddenly with the thrill of excitement and rage.

As swiftly as the red fox himself, Baree darted to the rescue. He was as big and as heavy as the fox, and when he struck Napakaseew, it was with a ferocious snarl that Pierrot might have heard on the farther side of the pond, and his teeth sank like knives into the shoulder of Umisk's assailant. The fox was of a breed of forest highwaymen which kills from behind. He was not a fighter when it came fang-to-fang, unless cornered—and so fierce and sudden was Baree's assault that Napakaseew took to flight almost as quickly as he had begun his attack on Umisk.

Baree did not follow him, but went to Umisk, who lay half in the mud, whimpering and snuffling in a curious sort of way. Gently Baree nosed him, and after a moment or two Umisk got up on his webbed feet, while fully twenty or thirty beavers were making a tremendous fuss in the water near the shore.

After this the beaver pond seemed more than ever like home to Baree.

Chapter VI

While lovely Nepeese was shuddering over her thrilling experience under the rock—while Pierrot still offered grateful thanks in his prayers for her deliverance and Baree was becoming more and more a fixture at the beaver-pond—Bush McTaggart was perfecting a little scheme of his own up at Post Lac Bain, about forty miles north and west. McTaggart had been Factor at Lac Bain for seven years. In the Company's books down in Winnipeg he was counted a remarkably successful man. The expense of his post was below the average, and his semi-annual report of furs always ranked among the first. After his name, kept on file in the main office, was one notation which said: "Gets more out of a dollar than any other man north of God's lake."

The Indians knew why this was so. They called him Napao Wetikoo—the man-devil. This was under their breath—a name whispered sinisterly in the glow of tepee fires, or spoken softly where not even the winds might carry it to the ears of Bush McTaggart. They feared him; they hated him. They died of starvation and sickness, and the tighter Bush McTaggart clenched the fingers of his iron rule, the more meekly, it seemed to him, did they respond to his mastery. His was a small soul, hidden in the hulk of a brute, which rejoiced in power. And here—with the raw wilderness on four sides of him—his power knew no end. The Big Company was behind him. It had made him king of a domain in which there was little law except his own. And in return he gave back to the Company bales and bundles of furs beyond their expectation. It was not for them to have suspicions. They were a thousand or more miles away—and dollars counted.

Gregon might have told. Gregson was the investigating agent of that district, who visited McTaggart once each year. He might have reported that the Indians called McTaggart Napao Wetikoo because he gave them only half price for their furs; he might have told the Company quite plainly that he kept the people of the trap-lines at the edge of starvation through every month of the winter, that he had them on their knees with his hands at their throats—putting the truth in a mild and pretty way—and that he always had a woman or a girl, Indian or half-breed, living with him at the Post. But Gregson enjoyed his visits too much at Lac Bain. Always he could count on two weeks of coarse pleasures; and in addition to that, his own womenfolk at home wore a rich treasure of fur that came to them from McTaggart.

One evening, a week after the adventure of Nepeese and Baree under the rock, McTaggart sat under the glow of an oil lamp in his "store." For six weeks there had been in him a great unrest. It was just six weeks ago that Pierrot had brought Nepeese on her first visit to Lac Bain since McTaggart had been Factor there. She had taken his breath away. Since then he had been able to think of nothing but her. Twice in that six weeks he had gone down to Pierrot's cabin. Tomorrow he was going again. Marie, the slim Cree girl over in his cabin, he had forgotten—just as a dozen others before Marie had slipped out of his memory. It was Nepeese now. He had never seen anything quite so beautiful as Pierrot's girl.

Audibly he cursed Pierrot as he looked at a sheet of paper under his hand, on which for an hour or more he had been making notes out of worn and dusty Company ledgers. It was Pierrot who stood in his way. Pierrot's father, according to those notes, had been a full-blooded Frenchman. Therefore Pierrot was half French, and Nepeese was quarter French—though she was so beautiful he could have sworn there was not more than a drop or two of Indian-Chippewayan, Cree, Ojibway, Dog Rib—anything—there would have been a trouble all in the matter. He would have bent them to his power, and Nepeese would have come to his cabin, as Marie came six months ago. But there was the accursed French of it! Pierrot and Nepeese were different. And yet—

He smiled grimly, and his hands clenched tighter. After all, was not his power sufficient? Would even Pierrot dare stand against that? If Pierrot objected, he would drive him from the country—from the trapping regions that had come down to him as heritage from father and grandfather, and even before their day. He would make of Pierrot a wanderer and an outcast, as he had made wanderers and outcasts of a score of others who had lost his favor. No other Post would sell to or buy from Pierrot if Le Bete—the black cross—was put after his name. That was his power—a law of the Factors that had come down through the centuries. It was a tremendous power for evil. It had brought him Marie, the slim, dark-eyed Cree girl, who hated him—and in spite of her hatred "kept house for him." That was the polite way of explaining her presence if explanations were ever necessary.

McTaggart looked again at the notes he had made on the sheet of paper. Pierrot's trapping country, his own property according to the common law of the wilderness, was very valuable. During the last seven years he had received an average of a thousand dollars a year for his furs, for McTaggart had been unable to cheat Pierrot quite as completely as he had cheated the Indians. A thousand dollars a year! Pierrot would think twice before he gave that up. McTaggart chuckled as he made his way through the darkness to the door. Nepeese as good as belonged to him. He would have her if it cost—Pierrot's life. And—why not? It was all so easy. A shot on a lonely trap-line, a single knife-thrust—and who would know? Who would guess where Pierrot had gone? And it would all be Pierrot's fault. For the last time he had seen Pierrot, he had made an honest proposition: he would marry Nepeese. Yes, even that. He had told Pierrot so. He had told Pierrot that when the latter was his father-in-law, he would pay him double price for furs.

And Pierrot had stared—had stared with that strange, stunned look in his face, like a man dazed by a blow from a club. And so if he did not get Nepeese without trouble it would all be Pierrot's fault. Tomorrow McTaggart would start again for the half-breed's country. And the next day Pierrot would have an answer for him, Bush McTaggart chuckled again when he went to bed.

Until the next to the last day Pierrot said nothing to Nepeese about what had passed between him and the Factor at Lac Bain. Then he told her.

"He is a beast—a man-devil," he said, when he had finished. "I would rather see you out there—with her—dead." And he pointed to the tall spruce under which the princess mother lay.

Nepeese had not uttered a sound. But her eyes had grown bigger and darker, and there was a flush in her cheeks which Pierrot had never seen there before. She stood up when he had done, and she seemed taller to him. Never had she looked quite so much like a woman, and Pierrot's eyes were deep-shadowed with fear and uneasiness as he watched her while she gazed off into the northwest—toward Lac Bain.

She was wonderful, this slip of a girl-woman. Her beauty troubled him. He had seen the look in Bush McTaggart's eyes. He had heard the thrill in McTaggart's voice. He had caught the desire of a beast in McTaggart's face. It had frightened him at first. But now—he was not frightened. He was uneasy, but his hands were clenched. In his heart there was a smoldering fire. At last Nepeese turned and came and sat down beside him again, at his feet.

"He is coming tomorrow, ma chérie," he said. "What shall I tell him?"

The Willow's lips were red. Her eyes shone. But she did not look up at her father.

"Nothing, Nootawé—except that you are to say to him that I am the one to whom he must come—for what he seeks."

Pierrot bent over and caught her smiling. The sun went down. His heart sank with it, like cold lead.

From Lac Bain to Pierrot's cabin the trail cut within half a mile of the beaver pond, a dozen miles from where Pierrot lived, and it was here on a twist of the creek in which Wakayoo had caught fish for Baree, that Bush McTaggart made his camp for the night. Only twenty miles of the journey could be made by canoe, and as McTaggart was traveling the last stretch afoot, his camp was a simple affair—a few cut balsams, a light blanket, a small fire. Before he prepared his supper the Factor drew a number of copper-wire snares from his small pack and spent half an hour in setting them in rabbit runways. This method of securing meat was far less arduous than carrying a gun in hot weather, and it was certain. Half a dozen snares were good for at least three rabbits, and one of these three was sure to be young and tender enough for the frying-pan. After he had placed his snares McTaggart set a skillet of bacon over the coals and boiled his coffee.

Of all the odors of a camp, the smell of bacon reaches farthest in the forest. It needs no wind. It drifts on its own wings. On a still night a fox will sniff it a mile away—twice that far if the air is moving in the right direction. It was this smell of bacon that came to Baree where he lay in his hollow on top of the beaver dam.

Since his experience in the canyon and the death of Wakayoo, he had not fared particularly well. Caution had held him near the pond, and he had lived almost entirely on crawfish. This new perfume that came with the night wind roused his hunger. But it was elusive: now he could smell it—the next instant it was gone. He left the dam and began questing for the source of it in the forest, until after a time he lost it altogether. McTaggart had finished frying his bacon and was eating it.

Enter the villain, Bush McTaggart! How does Baree fit into the situation.

Blood Analysis Helps Doctor in Diagnosis

The doctor who used to feel his patient's pulse or gaze into a gaping mouth to determine the cause of illness nowadays takes a drop of blood to analyze. The guilt for much of human suffering has been traced to the germs, tiny but deadly, which force their entrance into the human body, and which can only be detected by such analysis.

"Blood tests provide us with clues to an ever-growing number of ailments," said a doctor to the writer.

"It is being found, for instance, that eye complaints are often due to the absorption of germs which have affected other parts of the body, such as the tonsils. We can often detect them by testing the blood.

"Many cases of illness are due to something taken in from without—usually microscopic germs. More and more of these germs are becoming known to us every day. There is reason to believe that the origins of other diseases which are still unknown may be found in the same cause."

VOGUE FOR THE TWO-PIECE SUIT; PARIS ACCLAIMS CLOTH COATS

ANY woman may justly take pride in having her costume described as strictly tailored, for it is indeed very complimentary to her appearance. A strictly tailored ensemble assures a certain perfection not only in the finesse and classic simplicity of the suit or coat-dress itself, but in every accessory detail as well. The shoes, hosiery, hat, scarf, hand bag and of course the blouse which completes the two-piece suit must perform evidence a discriminating knowledge of correct dress if one be strictly tailored.

The reward of exercising this careful judgment justifies the effort, for in the presence of the garishness of this season's wildly be-patterned silks and general flamboyant color the refined charm of the strictly tailored receives flattering emphasis.

That hazy blue is now in smart fashion is most gratifying to the woman of conservative taste who aspires to be strictly tailored. For practical wear a correct regulation tailored suit is here pictured. It may be successfully styled of fine twill, covert or wool rep and for late fall the new suede cloth is widely recommended.

New color interest is manifest in early fall tailored suit and dress collections in that negre brown and the wine tones are shown, also the rose-brown range. Choice color blends are sorts. At the international tennis tournaments recently held in Paris and during the racing season long coats of woolsens so exquisitely fine as to demand attention registered as an accepted mode.

A charming simplicity, which is to a cunning manipulation of the fabric itself marked the styling of these favored summer-weight coats.

Capes carefully designed so as not to break the straight silhouette similar to the model which is posed to the right in the picture are apparently first in favor. In some instances the stylist contrives to introduce in conjunction with the cape a slightly bloused effect, for the blouse-back is the French idea of style supreme.

A few of the capes come around to the front opening and in these cases the coats are for the most part sleeveless. Accenting the idea of also brought out. Tawny rose-beige and subdued wine shades all blended and related are accented. Harmonizing hats and footwear will enhance the autumnal tableau.

The new felt hats to be worn with the smart tailored suit or coat show dented and creased crowns and rolling brims, with ribbon trimming a shade darker than the hat. Cocoa kid pumps with beige hose or strapped pumps of parchment shade are noted among newest daytime footwear. In hand bags, soft effects in pouches vie with novel envelopes. It is said that underarm bags will be fashionable.

clever cloth manipulation is scalloping which adorns many.

Creative genius has busied itself this season inventing cunning plaitings and foldings of cloth. A particularly happy inspiration along this line is expressed in the coat to the left of the accompanying illustration. The cuffs, collar and wide hem border of this garment show a cunning handling of the cloth in a fanciful plaited way. It is artful cloth treatments, such as this which add zest to the popular theme of self-trim effects.

QUEEN VICTORIA LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Two Famous Women Born the Same Year

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in many American homes.

One of the many women who praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Mrs. Adolph Bratke of 4316 South 13th St., South Omaha, Nebr., who was in a rundown condition for four years before she tried the Compound. "I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," she writes, "and I have felt my health steadily improving." Mrs. Bratke continued to take the Compound for a year and a half and at the end of that time she found herself in excellent health. "I am feeling fine now and do all my work myself," she wrote in her most recent letter. "I am the mother of six and manage an eight-room house without anybody to help."

GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Nero

A RED-HEADED boy, scarcely more than a child in years, handsome and gorgeously dressed, stood receiving the humble salutations of the Roman senate one day in 51 A. D. Nearby, forgotten and unnoticed, stood a plainly attired lad. The red-headed youth was Nero, newly adopted son of his great-uncle, Claudius, emperor of Rome. The other boy was Britannicus, only son of Claudius and rightful heir to the throne. The strange muddling of the two lads' true positions was due to Nero's mother, Agrippina.

Nero was grandnephew of Claudius. He was brought up as a child in poverty and neglect. But when weak, vacillating old Claudius mounted the throne, Agrippina won the emperor's half-imbecile affections and persuaded him to divorce his first wife and marry her. She then promptly poisoned the deposed wife and concentrated all her wiles into cajoling Claudius to declare Nero his heir instead of Britannicus. Having induced the emperor to make such public pledge and to compel the senate to accept Nero as future emperor, Agrippina poisoned Claudius and declared the sixteen-year-old Nero emperor. Later Britannicus was also killed to make the new ruler's claims more secure.

The first five years of the young monarch's reign were ideal. Guided by his mother, he made kind and righteous laws, conciliating the people and the army, and giving promise of a golden era for Rome. Nero, coached cleverly by his crafty old tutor, Seneca, showed forth only the lovable, kindly side of his nature; his violent temper, selfishness and evil propensities being wisely curbed. He was looked on as a model sovereign. But as time passed, he grew impatient at his mother's stern rule and longed to be absolute master. Her guidance irritated him. The two clashed repeatedly, and at last Nero proved himself Agrippina's true son as well as an instrument of "poetic justice" by having his mother assassinated.

Now, freed from all restraint, the man's true character asserted itself. He plunged into wild excesses, performing in the arena as a common charioteer, declaring himself the foremost singer and poet of the world, and treating the populace to original songs and plays. When any sought to check his mad whims he wasted little time or scruple in arranging for the offender's death. His wife, Octavia, was thus put out of the way, as in time were Seneca and other famous Romans. He had married an unscrupulous patrician woman, Poppa, by name, divorcing her from Otho, her first husband, who later amply avenged himself for the outrage. Poppa urged Nero on to fresh crimes and dissolutions, until at last he had so far exhausted every pleasure as to yearn for some absolutely new sensation. It was then that the idea occurred to him to set fire to Rome and to compose a grand epic song upon its destruction.

He followed out this barbarous plan with such success that three-fourths of the city was soon in ashes. The people, who had patiently borne his former caprices, were furious at this wanton cruelty. Rebellion was threatened. To appease them the frightened tyrant hit on a scheme that has made his name a term of loathing through all ages.

He declared that the Christians had set fire to the city, and, by way of punishment, murdered them by hundreds, hoping thus to shift the blame of the conflagration from his own guilty shoulders. It had always been Rome's policy to respect the religions of her conquered provinces, thereby pacifying the people of such lands and averting religious uprisings. But Nero saw no need for following out this plan as regarded the Christians. They were a sect of poor, unimportant folk, representing no land, and thus presenting no dangers of a possible insurrection. They had no mortal ruler nor kingdom; no opportunity to retaliate for wrongs done them. Their creed also commanded forgiveness of injuries and forbade vengeance.

Thus they were safe victims for the imperial despot.

But, by the very tortures and oppressions to which he subjected its believers the new faith endured and gained strength. The blood of its martyrs, the sufferings of its followers served only to fan its early, feeble spark into a light that was destined to illumine the whole world; until the once despised and crushed religion wholly superseded the Roman heathenism that had sought to destroy it, and made its center of government, by a strange irony of fate, in the very city where its first terrible persecutions had been enacted.

Nero's course was well-nigh run. In spite of his pretext that the Christians had set Rome afire, the people grew to hate him. He murdered Poppa, and in a fit of remorse plunged into newer crimes. Conspiracies and rebellions sprang up all over the empire. Otho at last marched against the tyrant who had robbed him of his wife. With him was Galba, governor of Spain. Nero fled, and, seeing himself on the point of capture, committed suicide.

Today he is chiefly remembered, not as poet or emperor, or even as debauchee, but by reason of his sin against the Christians and for the miraculous effect of his insane, futile effort to efface them from the earth.

Orchard
InformationHINTS ON PRIZE-
WINNING APPLES

The winning of prizes on apple exhibits in agricultural shows depends largely on the judgment of the man who selects the specimens. Attention to a few cardinal rules in choosing the exhibit, says the New Jersey state extension specialist in fruit growing, will result in winning a larger number of blue ribbons. Color, size, uniformity, condition, and freedom from blemishes are the five main points considered by the judge in awarding premiums.

Freedom from blemishes is an indication of carefully grown and handled fruit. No specimen with a scale mark, wormhole, curculio sting or other defect should be exhibited, even though it has good size and color. Each apple should be perfect.

Specimens should be of good color for the variety. The color should be deep and unmarred by russetting, scalding or sunburn. Red varieties should be completely red, while green or yellow varieties should carry no red color or blush.

The size should be the most desirable for the variety. A very large or very small apple is usually undesirable in the eyes of the judge.

The term "uniformity" indicates that all specimens on a plate should be of even size, shape and color. When the five apples are on the plate, they should appear as nearly alike as possible.

The term "condition" refers to the maturity. Specimens should be ripe and firm, with no signs of shriveling or decay. A specimen which "gives" slightly or wrinkles when squeezed with the hand, is too ripe for exhibit purposes.

Fruit exhibited in containers should be properly packed. The container should be clean and bright, and properly marked with the name of the variety, grade, size and quantity of the fruit.

Spray Young Trees When Any Emergency Arises

With many growers the spraying of young orchards often is an emergency measure. That is all right, provided the orchard is carefully watched and the emergency does not become too serious.

With young, nonbearing trees it is unnecessary to follow a fixed spray schedule. Careful attention will result in the detection of pests almost as soon as they appear. Control measures should be brought into play as soon as an infestation threatens to become serious. Aphids and scale are prominent among the insects that frequently make spraying necessary. Foliage diseases and leaf-eating insects often give trouble.

During certain seasons the young orchard will require more spraying than in others. Some varieties frequently are more susceptible to certain diseases.

Fire blight can be controlled. When this disease gets started in the farm orchard many people believe that it is almost useless to attempt to control it. This belief is a fallacy, writes Purley L. Keene in the Dakota Farmer.

Fire blight is a bacterial disease which is spread by bees, insects and birds and possibly to some extent by the wind. No spray is effective in its control. Control measures consist of cutting out all blighted wood and cankerous spots and disinfection of all cut surfaces with formalin or corrosive sublimate. As an added precaution the tools used in cutting out the blighted wood should also be frequently disinfected.

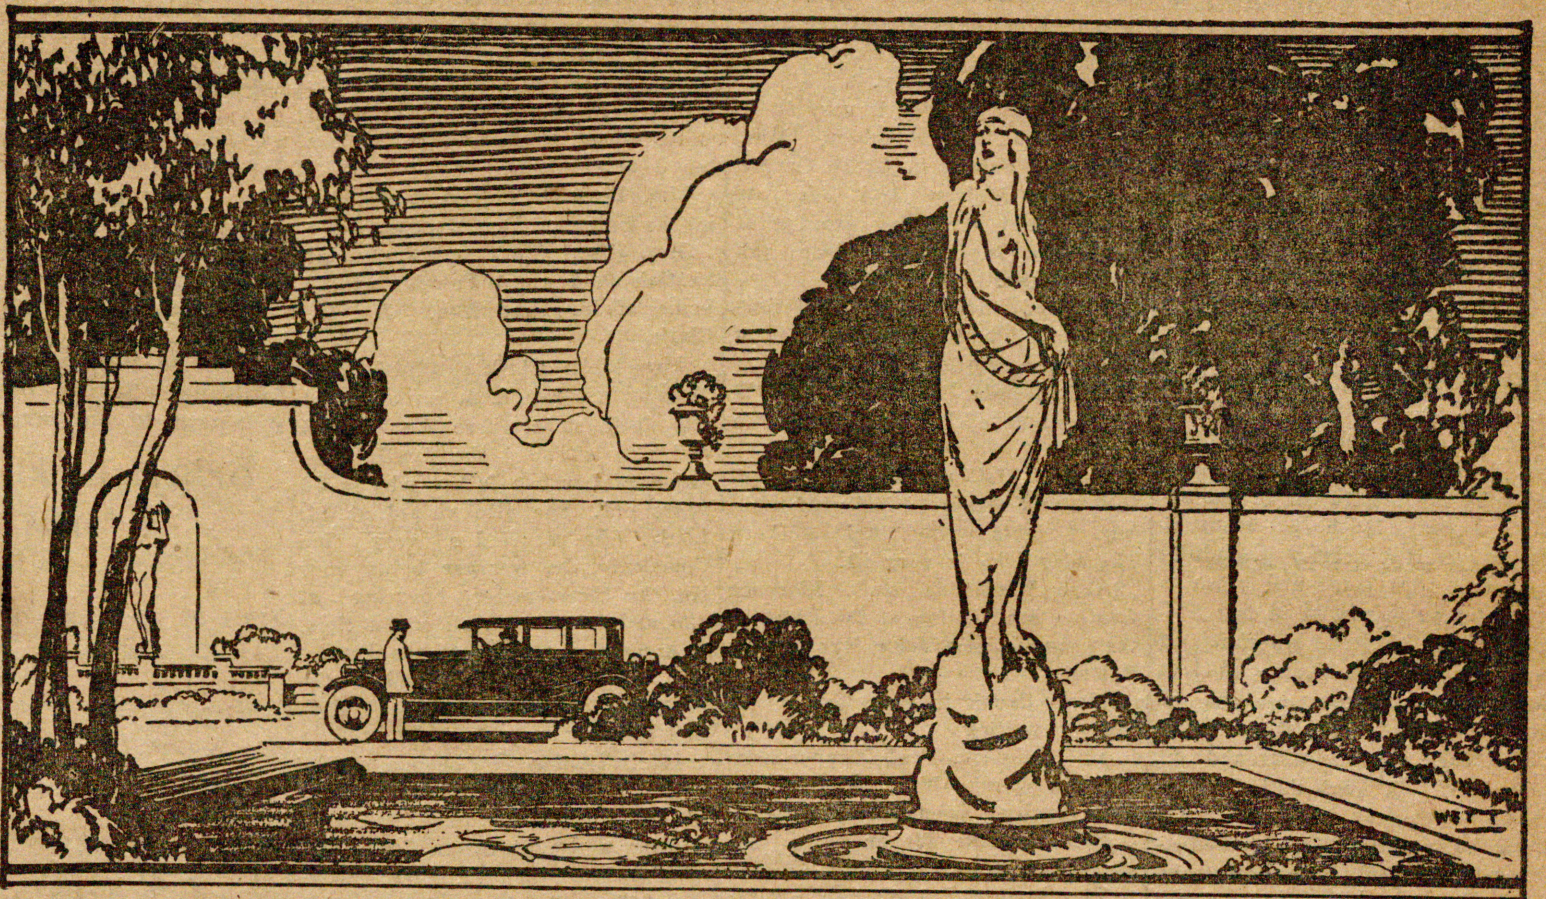

Blight may be removed at any time it becomes noticeable with the possible exception of the months of June and July when it is spreading most rapidly. August is the very best time of the year to do this work. If the blight was not cut out last fall it should be cut at once and all prunings taken from the orchard and burned. If these ordinary precautions are taken to control blight the orchard can be kept fairly free from the disease.

When to Spray

The most important single operation in the orchard is spraying, for upon this work usually depends the marketable quality of the fruit. Not many years ago there was a decided prejudice against the spraying of trees lest the fruit be poisoned, just as a hundred years ago farmers feared that an iron plow would poison the soil. Now the question is what to apply and when to apply it, and strange as it may seem to the uninitiated, the experts are not yet in entire agreement on this matter.

Walnut Tree Poisoning

The reason tomato and other plants frequently wilt and die when planted near walnut trees is because the walnut roots give off a poisonous substance called juglone, it is believed by A. A. Hansen of Purdue, who has been making investigations. This poison affects the plants that come in contact with it. Mr. Hansen advises that susceptible crops, such as tomatoes, potatoes, alfalfa, and apple trees, should not be planted in the vicinity of walnut or butternut trees.

Irish Linen Trade Low

The linen trade of Belfast and Ulster, which is experiencing hard times, is now further embarrassed by foreign competition. The low exchange rates make foreign yarns cheaper than those produced in Ulster. The rate of the franc in France and Belgium enables manufacturers in those countries to undersell Ulster. According to recent official returns, the linen exported shows a drop of $1,250,000 a month, in the part of 1926 covered by the figures, as compared with the corresponding period in 1925, and 1925 was a bad year.—Chicago Daily News.

Canny Titus Tite

Took No Chances

Darius L. Chauncey, the millionaire broker, said at a Boston brokers' banquet:

"And then there's the mean speculator, the speculator who wants to make a million or two without taking any risks. I told one of these speculators a story the other day."

"It was a story about Titus Tite, the village usurer. Titus was watching a patent medicine man conduct a sale of patent medicine. The sale had no success, no success at all, and the medicine man at last, in a spirit of bitter irony, put up at auction a bright new silver dollar."

"But the villagers were suspicious, though it was clear that the dollar was a good one. Titus Tite, however, went so far as to bid a dime for it. 'The coin's yours, Mr. Rockefeller,' said the medicine man. 'There are no further bids. Pass up your dime.' And from his automobile he held out his hand with the dollar in it."

"But Titus whined up at him: 'Ah, take me dime out of the dollar, and gimme 90 cents change.'"

Penn's "Walking Purchase"

In 1682 William Penn purchased of the Delaware Indians a tract of land in the present counties of Bucks and Northampton, Pennsylvania, bounded on the east by the Delaware river and in the interior to a point as far as a man could walk in three days. Penn and the Indians started out to walk, beginning at the mouth of Neshaning creek. At the end of a day and a half Penn concluded that he had enough territory and a deed was given him for the land at this point, which was 40 miles from the start. In 1737 the distance was increased to 70 miles.

New Proverb

Jesse Livermore, the noted Wall street operator, said at a luncheon: "A young minister asked my advice the other day about investing in a certain company. I sent for a list of the company's officers and ticked them off one by one. They were a shady lot."

"There!" I said. "Keep off, my friend. A company is known by the men it keeps."

Business a Pleasure

"Yes, my mind is made up. I shall be an oculist."

"Why that decision?"

"Just think of gazing into a girl's eyes and charging her for it."

Dog Fond of Coffee

McPherson county, Kansas, has the reputation of leading that state in its coffee consumption, due mainly to the fact that it is largely peopled by the descendants of Swedish pioneers. Now, Otis Greenlaw of Canton owns a dog that is strictly a McPherson county product. While no assertion is made that it is of Swedish extraction, it is a coffee drinker and three times a day has its coffee with its meals.

Levi Doty Oldest Humane Officer

Levi Doty of Frankfort is the oldest Humane Society worker in this section of Illinois and even up to the present he is still active in fighting against cruelty to animals and children as well. His interest in public affairs of the day is as keen as ever. In his time he has done a great good to humanity and his life has been rich in good deeds and works. In the old files of the Chicago Tribune is found the following interesting contribution in its issue of May 23, 1882:

To the Editor of the Chicago Tribune:-

The President of the Humane Society in his recent address at the Grand Pacific Hotel very properly says that "The love of justice should be the inspiration of the society's work." Is the president of this very worthy society prejudiced in remarks then made and also to a reporter as published in last Saturday's issue, or is he ignorant of the wrong he did a worthy efficient officer? In his address he says of Mr. Levi Doty: "The State Agent at the Stock yards is deaf and out of health." Though dull of hearing, he is not deaf, and as to his health, he is more active and efficient than the officer the Humane Society has sent there, and against him I have not a word of complaint. It was scarcely fitting to have spoken in ignorance thus of Mr. Doty, when he knew he was then attending the funeral of his father, an honorable Christian man, a pioneer of Will County, aged 90 years, who had for many years of feebleness been cared for in the home of his only surviving son.

Again the State Agent's work was disparagingly spoken of by saying that "the work at the Stock Yards had been very fairly done, especially since Officer Mitchell had been sent there", and that his continual presence showed that the Society intended to control cruelty.

Having made some personal investigation, the offer is here made that if Mr. Shortall will show that his officers, since Mr. Doty's appointment, have done one-half as much in the number of arrests and in preventing overloading by taking stock out of cars and such like work at the yards, then Mr. Doty shall pay $100.00 into the treasury of the "Home of the Friendless". Is it not a wonder that this lover of justice, while speaking of the infirmities of the State Agent, did not allude to the officer he himself sent there, more detective in sight than the State Agent is in hearing. The State Agent is eminently qualified for this work, having formerly been a stock feeder and shipper himself.

If Mr. Shortall will send his best officer to Mr. Doty, he will accompany him to a competent veterinary surgeon, and if Mr. Doty does not pass the better examination another donation shall be paid to the Treasurer of the Home of the Friendless. In love of justice, it ought also to be known that the marking of dogs was stopped by this deaf and feeble agent, who arrested six men belonging to one firm, at one time, for this offense. Perhaps he was especially out of health that day. Since Mr. Doty has been at the yards, not one complaint has been left uninvestigated over night. The President of the Humane Society knows this is not the case with his agents in the city, and yet, with a large number of complaints unexamined on the city file, he sends a man to the Stock Yards, unsolicited, to assist the State Agent, whose files are clear every evening. Why so? Will the Directors of this worthy Society inquire why? It is to prevent cruelty to animals? The facts ought to be known for the sake of the contributors and friends of the cause.

Yours truly,
 Lover of Justice

ORLAND M. E. CHURCH

Elmer Setterlund, Pastor

Friday August 13th. Moving picture is Johnny Hines in "Live Wire", a snappy comedy.

Sunday August 15th. Bible school at 9:30. Morning worship at 10:30 the sermon is another in a series on "The World's Greatest Short Stories."

Evening young people's meeting at 7:30. The speaker of the evening will be the former pastor of the Palos Park Church.

Last Sunday morning the pulpit of the church was supplied by the Rev. Mr. Terry, pastor of Midlothian Union Church. Mr. Setterlund of Orland preached at the Midlothian church and enjoyed a very good hearing at this church. Laymen at Midlothian are asking for another exchange of pulpits between these pastors.

Last Sunday evening, August 8th, Professor Stolz of the Y.M.C.A., College, Chicago, gave a very interesting and illuminating address at the young people's meeting on "The Religion of the Letter and the Religion of the Spirit." The speaker emphasized the fact that the religion of the letter killeth but the spirit giveth life. Absurdities in literalistic interpretation of Christianity were well illustrated.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH

The first Friday of the month found many of St. Michael's Parish attending the 7 o'clock mass in the morning and the holy hour service in the evening. At this hour, Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given, a sermon preached by Rev. Wm. Gorey, pastor; the rosary and litany recited and hymns sung by the Misses Walsh, Miss Marguerite Newcomb and Mrs. Wm Homering.

Sunday School classes are now being conducted during the time intervening between the 8:30 and 10:00 o'clock masses.

Rev. Wm. Gorey had the pleasure last week, of showing many of his friends his present parish church. Father Gorey reports them to be most agreeably surprised at the completeness of the little edifice. All unanimously acclaim its interior a most inspiring place of worship.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Homering's small daughter Margaret is convalescing after an acute attack of appendicitis and pneumonia.

Mr. Ray McGinnis, formerly of Orland, is reported precariously ill at his home in Chicago.

OAK LAWN

Miss Elsie Skinner with her chum, Helen McCartin of Chicago, are visiting in the East. Niagara Falls, Annapolis, Washington, D. C., Charleston, West Virginia are their points of interest.

St. Gerald's carnival is running full swing on the church lot on 95th Street. They have a merry-go-round and ferris wheel besides the other usual concessions. This carnival will run from August 9th to the 15th.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Mecklenberg and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jörn have returned from Eagle River where they caught plenty of big fish. Now this isn't a fish story.

Furniture For Sale—Beds, dressers, rugs and living room suite, gas range, etc., cheap. Call and see. Mrs. John Emery, Oak Lawn, Ill. Adv.—

The contract has been let for re-decorating the Oak Lawn school house. A contractor from Congress Park, Illinois got the job. Just how soon the work will start has not been made known.

Mr. and Mrs. James Tucker are enjoying good roads and weather on their transcontinental tour. The last that was heard and just a few days ago they had been visiting with friends in South Dakota and expected to leave there for a jump into Montana.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Samuelson daughter Margaret with Mrs. Samuelson's father, Mr. Bates of Chicago motored to Danville and spent last week there visiting their relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Emery, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Elvidge and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Samuelson motored to the dog races at Harvey Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Piper and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jensen are motoring down the Mississippi river for their vacation. They have planned on visiting many historical places.

MY LIFE IS ONLY A FAILURE

My life is only a failure,
Like a boat out on the high sea,
Tossed and kicked about
A total wreck to be.

My life is only a failure
Like a storm out on the gale
And the work that I have done,
I have only failed.

My life is only a failure
Full of sadness and gloom
I got to hitting the highballs
And filling up on the moon.

Everything I got hold of and Nothing seemed to go right
And things that are done in a hurry
Turn up in a terrible plight.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Weidner, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Weidner and ten guests spent the week end at Fox Lake and all had a wonderful time. Miss Gertrude Landahl is on the sick list but will be able to get around very shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Kral of South Shore Drive entertained some leading South Side Business Men and their families Sunday.

Mrs. Neumer and her daughter Pearl have moved into Oak Lawn and are living at 96th and Central Avenue. They have purchased the acres down that way.

The Powers Boys have taken over the Daily News and Evening American paper routes from Anno Meidenna.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
Regular services of the church are being continued during the summer. Every Sunday morning at 10 o'clock the Church School meets. At 11 o'clock Rev. E. A. Reese conducts the services which consist of singing, responsive Bible reading and a sermon. Everyone is welcomed, no one is barred from participation in these services.

The Ladies Aid of the Congregational church made a nice profit at the bake sale conducted by the committee of which Mr. Harry Philips was chairman. It was the Ladies Aid who first saved up some money for the new parsonage which is now to be a reality. For a long time they have been conducting sales and bazaars pointing to the future when the church would have its own home.

The building committee is asking every one of the friends of the church to help both financially and with the work of the parsonage. Contributions are being received both from former pledges and new gifts. Harry Preston is treasurer of the church and all checks should be made out to him. Any fair evening will find men out working on the building. Bring a shovel or a hammer and join the workers. Last Saturday was a banner day with fifteen men on the job.

The church basement is getting a renovation by the able hands of Mr. Thos. Wilson, Mr. Arthur Wagner and Mr. E. Luse. New window screens, new window frames, new paint and new electric light fixtures will make this a very attractive part of the church. Come and see your church.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Yore entertained at 6 o'clock dinner Wednesday evening Rev. Geraghty, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hartma, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ryan and Miss Harriet Marr.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ryan entertained Mr. and Mrs. Convey and daughter Lillian and Miss Lillian Doodly from Chicago, Sunday.

Eating Greater Cause of Death Than Drinking

Drink is the second greatest cause of disease and death. Food comes first, then drink. Excluding alcoholic beverages, there are dozens of drinks on the market today whose effect is detrimental, particularly to children. Milk is the best drink for children. Not only is it drink, but food as well—the most nearly perfect food known to man.

Milk is an all-the-year-round drink and for this reason the children often rebel against drinking it. This condition, however, may be overcome by the introduction of the milked drink. Milk or diluted evaporated milk may be mixed with eggs or used in fruit juices or in some other way which will disguise the fact that the drink contains milk. In the hot/summer months when the child naturally drinks more than in cooler weather, it is wise to vary the ways of serving milk, so as not to create a distaste for this important food.

In connection with mixed drinks, the following formulas for milk beverages may aid mothers in serving something new:

Iced Cocoa
3 tbsp. cocoa 1 1/2 cups evaporated milk
2 tbsp. sugar diluted with
1/2 cup hot water 1 1/2 cups water
Few grains salt 1/4 tsp. vanilla

Scald the diluted milk in a double boiler. Mix cocoa, sugar, salt and add the hot water. Cook over a low flame from 10 to 15 minutes, stirring occasionally to prevent burning. Add the cocoa the scalded milk; return to the double boiler and continue cooking for 10 minutes. Add vanilla, chill before serving. Pour into tall glasses which contain a few small cubes of ice. Serve plain or top with whipped cream sprinkled with cinnamon. Serves four.

Egg-Nog.
1 egg diluted with
Few grains salt 2-3 cup ice water
1 tbsp. sugar 2 tbsp. berry or Few grains salt 2 tbsp. cherry juice or nutmeg 2 tbsp. non-alcoholic sherry

Separate white from yolk of egg. Add salt to white and beat until stiff. Beat yolk until thick and lemon colored and add the fruit juices, nutmeg and sugar. Combine diluted milk with yolk mixture. Pour into a tall glass and put the egg white on top. Sprinkle top with chopped nuts and serve at once. Serves one.

Orange-Nog.
1/2 cup orange juice 1-3 cup evaporated
Few grains salt milk diluted
2 1-3 tsp. sugar with
1-3 cup cold water
Add sugar and salt to orange juice and pour slowly into the diluted milk stirring to mix thoroughly. Chill before serving. One-half tsp. lemon juice proves this drink for many. Serves one.

JETHRO'S WISE COUNSEL

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 18:1-27.
GOLDEN TEXT—To every man his work.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jethro Helps Moses.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jethro Gives Moses Good Advice.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Being Helpers.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Organizing for Service.

I. Jethro's Visit to Moses (vv. 1-6).

1. The occasion (v. 1).

Upon the receipt of the news of the marvelous deliverance of the Israelites from the Egyptians, Jethro went out to meet Moses.

2. The object (vv. 2-4).

It was to bring to Moses his wife and children. When God called him to Egypt to deliver His people Moses did not deem it wise to take his wife and children, therefore left them with his father-in-law.

3. The place (vv. 5, 6).

At Mount Sinai where the Israelites were encamped.

II. Moses' Reception of Jethro (vv. 7-12).

1. He bowed to him and kissed him (v. 7).

Moses not only honored him as his father-in-law, but as a priest of Midian. Jethro, though outside of the covenant people, evidently retained proofs of the true God as Melchisedec before him did.

2. Moses rehearsed to him the wonders which God had wrought through him (v. 8).

It is through the testimony of those who have experienced the wonders of God's grace that men come to know the true God.

3. Jethro's response (vv. 9-12).

(1) He rejoiced for all the goodness which the Lord had done to Israel, whom He had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians (v. 9).

(2) He blessed the Lord (v. 10). He not only praised the Lord for His deliverance of his son-in-law from the Egyptians, but for the deliverance of the people of Israel from their bondage.

(3) He confessed the supremacy of the Lord (v. 11). He said, "Now I know that the Lord is greater than all gods."

(4) He offered sacrifices to God (v. 12). We are unable to determine the degree of intelligence of this worship, but he evidently out of a sincere heart made this offering.

III. The Occasion (vv. 13-18).

1. After Jethro came to Moses he observed how completely Moses' time was taken in judging Israel. When he saw the greatness of the task, he inquired as to why he was doing the work all alone. Moses explained to him that his task was not merely a matter of judging, but of teaching the statutes and laws of God to the people. Jethro recognized Moses' motive, but insisted that his method was not a good one, as it would result in wasting his strength.

2. Jethro's plan (vv. 19-23).

(1) Moses was to be unto the people Godward—to bring their causes unto God and teach them the ordinances and laws, to show them the way wherein they must walk and the work they must do (vv. 19, 20).

(2) Suitable men should be provided as rulers over thousands, hundreds, fifties and tens (v. 21). All great matters should be disposed of by Moses, and all subsidiary matters should be adjusted by these judges.

(3) Qualifications of these subordinate judges (v. 26).

(a) They were to be "able men," that is, men of strength. They must be men of such intellectual power as to enable them to understand the problems presented, and of such will power as to execute the judgments rendered.

(b) "Such as fear God." This is the basis of true strength.

(c) "Men of truth." This means men who are able to discern truth, men who love truth, men who tell the truth.

(d) "Hating covetousness." These men must be haters of unjust gain. The man who is to be a ruler of the people must be free from the suspicion of following his profession because of personal gain.

IV. Moses Accedes to Jethro's Counsel (vv. 24-27).

This common-sense advice made a response in Moses' heart. He recognized that God was speaking through Jethro. According to Deut. 1:9-18 the people selected the judges and Moses appointed them. When this work had been done according to Jethro's advice, he took his departure, going into his own land.

Lesson From the Son of God

The highest service may be prepared for and done in the humblest surroundings. In silence, in waiting, obscure, unnoticed. In years of uneventful, unrecorded duties, the Son of God grew and waxed strong.

Embarrassed

My father was a preacher. One Sunday, just as he was getting to the climax of his sermon, he reached into his pocket and, horrors, pulled out a plug of tobacco in his absent-mindedness.

As if that were not bad enough, he raised it, also absent-mindedly, and was about to take a chew when he realized what he was doing.

Then he tried to slip it back into his pocket, but, of course, all eyes were on him and everybody saw what he had done. That was my most embarrassing moment.—J. A., in Capper's Weekly.

Czech Nobles to Emigrate

Twelve noblemen from Czechoslovakia are contemplating emigrating to America, probably Canada, as soon as Count Thun Hohenstein makes his report to them after a visit to America. They control considerable wealth and are expected to go in for farming on a large scale. They are interested in farming in Manitoba.

Work for Boy Scouts

In Duluth, Minn., there are an unusually large number of forested parks, but some of these parks have treeless areas estimated at a total of 200 acres. The park department of that city has enlisted the interest of local boy scouts in a tree-planting program, in which much of the actual setting out of trees will be done by the boys.

"A Thing of Beauty Is a Joy Forever"

This is one of the beauty spots of the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia. The exposition celebrates the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The view shows the tower of one of the main exhibit buildings rearing its head up from among the gorgeous landscape which artists have built around the giant structures which house exhibits from forty-three nations of the world. The Exposition continues until December 1.

"The Vine"

This magnificent bronze by Harriett Frishmuth is on display in the Palace of Fine Arts at the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition in Philadelphia where the 150th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence is being celebrated. This is but one of the many gorgeous and beautiful things to be seen in the Fine Arts exhibit. Famous artists from all parts of the world have sent their paintings, etchings and sculptures to Philadelphia to be exhibited during the exposition, which continues until December 1.

The homes of Sim Hohenstein and John Liess are being painted. ST. JOHN EVANGELICAL CH.

W. J. Cramer, Minister. Sunday School 9:30. German Services 10:30. Special Congregational meeting Tuesday August 17th at 7:45.

The Ladies Aid will meet in the church next Thursday at 2 o'clock. Sale of home bakery goods will be held next Saturday afternoon in the church parlors.

Mokena has a new business by way of a new oil concern. Karl E. Krapp has started running an oil tank truck for the Marland Oil Co. His tank truck has arrived and the oil storage tanks will be erected at the stock yards east of the village. The new company is to be known as the Mokena Oil Co. Gasoline and all kinds of oils will be handled.

The St. John Evangelical Cemetery has purchased five acres of land adjoining the St. John cemetery from John Cappel who donated one acre and sold the other four at $500 per acre. This land will be used to enlarge the cemetery. A new drive way will be built and the old one will be removed.

The St. Mary's parish will hold a big dance and celebration at the Cappel grove on Labor Day, Sept. 6.

Wm. Blackhurst of Chicago is spending his vacation at the John Horrace home.

The little daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Cramer was taken ill while they were visiting friends at Indianapolis and has not been able to be brought home. She is getting better.

The movie held at the St. John church parlors Wednesday night under the auspices of the Y. P. S. was quite well attended and $25 were taken in.

Carl Kraus recently held a dancing party at the Men's Club pavilion. By a clever arrangement in which a Remier Super radio and 4 power loud speakers in series were used the dance music was furnished by radio. Some of the best orchestras furnished the music. This was the first party of its kind ever held here.

Arthur Hall has a new Buick. Louis Carroll who has been very ill is not improving.

ORLAND

The Child Welfare Clinic will be held in the public school in Orland on Tuesday August 24th from 1 to 3:30 P.M., new time. All mo-

TINLEY PARK

Mr. and Mrs. George Lorenz attended the funeral of the formers sister, Mrs. Albert Hodell held at Mokena Friday morning.

The Bremen Bunco club was recently entertained by Mrs. Louis Hermsmeyer.

Quite a number of Tinley Park have been attending the races at Homewood and Crete.

The Hick, Mesenbrink, Kleppers and Mager families enjoyed a fine picnic at Lake Zurich recently.

There was a big picnic at the Linden Garden last Sunday when a singing society of Chicago met there with their families. A big dance will be held at the Saenger hall Labor Day.

Wm. Clemen's has been visiting in Oak Park.

Her Recognition

Small Elizabeth and her mother were walking down the street when they saw an urchin approaching them. Elizabeth stuck out her tongue. When they had gone on, her mother inquired "Why did you stick out your tongue at that little boy we just passed?" There was a pause while Elizabeth considered. "Why?" she replied, at length. "Why, mother, to show him I recognized him!"
